Amphibia 51

development and the survival of the youngones are all a matter of chance. But, in some amphibians, parental care is well developed. Such amphibians show extreme modification in behaviour and structure. The parental care in amphibia is of different types, and it can be roughly divided into following types.

1. By building the nests
  - (a) Mud nurseries and nests
  - (b) Constructing the nests on trees

  - (e) Oroviviparity.

1. By Building the Nurseries and Nests

To construct the nests, is the primitive method of parental care. The eggs are laid into the nests and protected from the enemies. They are as follows :

- (a) Mud nurseries and nests : The female of a tree frog Hyla faber, builds a basin shaped nursery in shallow water on the border region of a pond. The depth of the nursery is about 3 to 4 inches and it has a circular wall which emerges above the surface of the water. The eggs are laid into the nursery. Thus the eggs and early larval stages get protection from aquatic predators. Heavy rains later on destroy the walls of the nests and the larval escape to the general pond water.

In the Japanes tree frog Rhacophorus schlegelii, the mating pair digs a tunnel, and a chamber is created by secreting by female cloaca, which is beaten by hind legs into a froth. Eggs are laid into the frothy mass and the development begins. Then the bubbles of the frothy mass collapse, and the froth liquidifies. This liquid carries the larvae.

Fig. 4.9 : Hyla goeldii carrying eggs

maersupium the eggs are deposited and sheltered in a common pouch on the back. The pouch has one opening at the posterior end. This dorsal pouch develops only during breeding season.

(c) In cell like pouches : In Pipa americana the eggs are carried on the back of the female. The skin thickens and grows round the eggs, until all the eggs enclosed in a dermal cell. It is finally covered by a lid which is formed by a secretion from the glands of the skin.

During egg laying the cloaca projects as a bladder-like pouch directed forwards between the back of the female and the breast of the male. Due to such type of oviposition the eggs are evenly distributed over the whole back of the female.

Fig. 4.10 : Nototrema marsupium with brood pouch

In Pipa dorsigera small cutaneous pits develop on the dorsal skin of the female. The male places the eggs on these small pits having the operculum.

Fig. 4.11 : *Pipa americana

Fig. 4.12 : Pipa dorsigera showing dorsal pits

The partition between the pits is highly vascular and the larvae develop inside these broad pits. They attain a vascular tail. Then, the physiological exchange takes place between the developing larvae and the mother. Thus, the pseudo-placentation occurs in Pipa.

(iii) On the belly of the female : The female of the Ceylonesc Rhacophorus reticulatus carries her eggs on the belly. When the eggs are removed, belly shows shallow impressions.

(iv) In the gular pouch : In the South American small frog, Rhinoderma darwini, the development of the young ones take place in the gular pouch which is a modified vocal sac. During breeding season the vocal sacs enlarge and the eggs are put into it upto the hatching or even upto the completion of metamorphosis.

(v) In the mouth : The female of a West African tree-frog, Hylambates breviceps, carries the eggs in her mouth. The eggs are carried upto the hatching.

(d) Body coiling around the egg : The burrowing, limbless amphibian Ichthyophis glutinosus coils around the egg mass until they are hatched.

(c) Ovoviviparity : Two small East African toads Pseudophryne vivipara and Nectophryne tornieri are ovoviviparous. The females lay eggs in the oviduct and give birth to young ones.

(Order)

Pleuronemata

Holocephali

Ex. Skates

Ex. Saw fish

Ex. Chimera

Salient Features of Class Chondrichthyes

1. These are cartilaginous fishes with cartilaginous endoskeleton.
2. Microscopic, placoid scales are present.

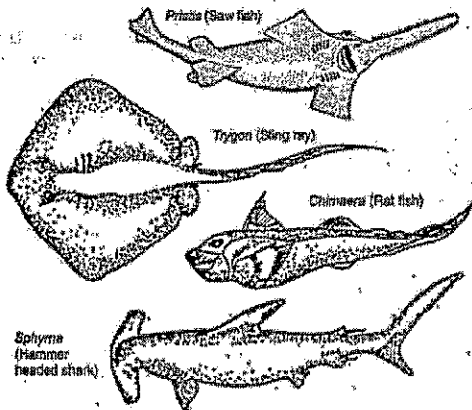

Fig. 3.1: Cartilaginous fishes

3. Mouth is present on ventral side. Teeth with enamel caps.
4. Five pairs of gill slits are present.
5. Tail is heterocercal or asymmetrical.

B. Sc. Part II > Semester III > ZOOLOGY Pt

6. Males have claspers.
7. Air bladder and operculum are absent.
8. Spiracles are present.
9. These are cold blooded vertebrates.
10. Heart is two chambered.
11. 5 to 7 pairs of aortic arches are present.
12. Intestine has scroll valve.
13. Testes are connected with pronephros.
14. These are oviparous or ovoviviparous.
15. Eggs are large with much yolk.
16. Fertilization is internal.
17. Caecum and cloaca are present.

The Class Chondrichthyes is further divided into two sub-classes (according to Storer and Usinger) Sub-class I Selachii and Sub-class II Bradiodonti but holocephali is the only order of Sub-class Bradiodonti.

Therefore, some authors have called Holocephali as the name of the sub-class itself, instead of Bradiodonti.

Sub-class : Selachii

- (i) Mostly marine form
- (ii) Gills in separate clefts lateral to pharynx.
- (iii) Cloaca present.
- (iv) A spiracle behind each eye.

The sub-class Selachii further divided into two orders

Order (I) Pleuronemata which includes shark and

Order (II) Hypotremata that includes Rays and Skates

Order (I) Pleuronemata
(i) Stream-lined body with heterocercal tail used for swimming.
